

TimberPro launches online store for replacement encoders LoggingEncoders.com

TIMBERPRO, SHAWANO, WI, has announced a new online store selling a line of improved replacement encoders designed specifically for the logging and timber industry. Loggingencoders.com provides loggers a one-stop shop for finding the exact rotary encoder for your needs.

The encoders are organized by head manufacturer (e.g. John Deere, Waratah, Valmet) and original equipment part number. A 1-year warranty is provided to reassure customers they are getting the quality they want. The website is easy to use and provides detailed specs for all products offered, product and company updates, and discount offers. Other encoders are susceptible to the harsh logging environment, but the loggingencoders.com encoder has a new and rugged design to ensure greater longevity:

- Solid State Sensing – advanced magnetic microchip technology providing resistance to high shock and vibration,
- Encapsulated Electronics – working electronics are completely sealed in an impenetrable epoxy,
- LED Indicators – with power supply and channel output indicators, you don't have to wonder if the encoder is working – you can see it.

Plans are to expand the product offering as demand for other models and products emerge. TimberPro has long provided innovative and reliable products for the logger and now offers an online store to meet the encoder needs of the logger. Visit loggingencoders.com or call 707-722-7899 for more information.
